YOUNG TORNADO CAUSED DAMAGE

Two houses were badly damaged and several other buildings received the kick of a lightening bolt about 4:40 Sunday afternoon. This occurred during a tornado of rain and powerful wind, that uprooted trees in places and demoralized telephone and power lines.

Only one bolt of lightening fell. Apparently the mark was the power line on lower Main street, for the juice traveled to the house of Gardiner Wiley and wrecked the meter and all the electric fixtures in the building. The ceiling and walls were shattered and much of the outside fishish was ripped from the house. Every room in the place was damaged except one occupied by Mr. Wiley and his two granddaughters, Rubira and Rosina Sharon.

At Merton Libby's house, Mr. Libby and Clifton Blake were standing in the stable doorway. They were knocked down and received slight shocks. In the house electric fixtures were torn from their fastenings and ceilings damaged.

The bolt continued on a rampage in adjoining houses around the lighting fixtures. Fuses were blown out in many places and the entire lower section of Norway temporarily put out of business. A number of transformers suffered heavily.

The fire alarm was touched off by the electric discharge and later the department was called to subdue any blaze which might develop in or around plastering or sheathing.

This storm practically covered the entire state and much damage was caused by the 34 mile-an-hour gale.

Obituary

William A. Bicknell

After two weeks of serious illness from heart trouble, William A. Bicknell died at his home in Norway, June 3rd, at 3.30 a. m.

He was born in Hebron, April 7, 1866, the son of Albinus and Mary Grenis Bicknell. After his graduation at Hebron Academy, he married Miss Sara A. Bicknell at West Paris, Sept. 19, 1890. She passed away in Norway in 1923.

Mr. Bicknell resided several years in Boston and came to Norway to enter business. This was carried on for some time and he sold out for other lines of employment.

He had served as town auditor and often worked as substitute clerk and bookkeeper in business places around Norway and Paris. He was president of the Norway Pine Grove Cemetery Association. Of late years he bought and sold fur and trappers' supplies, also handled an extensive line of guns and ammunition for a large patronage. He belonged to no fraternal orders.

The deceased leaves one son, Ronell C. Bicknell of Norway; three daughters, Miss Hazel Bicknell and Miss Zilpha Bicknell of Norway and Mrs. Eula Wood, wife of John W. Wood of Auburn, also one brother, Ben B. Bicknell, of Norway.

The funeral, Thursday, at 2 p. m., was held at his late home on Bridge Street. Burial at Pine Grove Cemetery.

Ellsworth E. Young

Funeral services wer held this (Thursday) afternoon at two o'clock in Donovan's parlors on School Street, Lynn, Mass., for Ellsworth E. Young, born in Norway 63 years ago and who was found dead in a room at 15 Amity St., Lynn, on Tuesday night. Additional services are to be held at Spiller's Undertaking Parlor in Norway on Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Burial will be in Pine Grove Cemetery, beside his father and mother and his first wife, who was Nina Young of Norway. Rev. D. Harold Hickey, pastor of St. Paul M. E. Church, conducted the services in that city, there were no bearers. A male quartet sang three selections.

Mr. Young was found dead by his wife, Alice Burdett Young, when she returned home after several hours of absence. Nathaniel Breen, medical examiner, summoned by deputy chief of police, Edward D. Callahan and Mathew J. Casey of Lynn Police Department pronounced death due to natural causes. Two children, who live in the neighborhood, told the police that they had been sent to a store by Mr. Young and that he prepared a feast of boiled lobsters for himself and his wife. Aparently he was awaiting her return when he was stricken. His body was found fully clothed on a bed with evidences that he had become nauseated shortly before death. The police and undertaker Donovan spent some time in locating relatives and finally found a brother, Frederick Young, employed in the compositing room of the Lynn Evening Item and a sister, Evelyn Young, Wakefield, who now resides at Rye Beach, N. H. Mr. Young had resided in Lynn for more than thirty years and of late years had been interested in real estate development and lodging houses. He recently purchased an estate at the corner of Suffolk and Newhall Streets and spent several thousand dollars in making repairs at other times he had conducted lodging houses on Silsbee, School and Smith Streets.

While in Norway, Mr. Young resided in the John Horne house, now owned by H. B. Foster, he also carried on the Elm Hotel for some time.

Besides relatives before mentioned, he leaves three sisters, two of whom are Mrs. Maud Watrous and Miss Mildred Young of New Jersey.

Reminiscences

By Alma Pendexter Hayden of Rochester, N. Y., Formerly of Norway

When I was fourteen, I "went away to school" to Limerick Academy, a very old institution of learning, where my grandfather was educatted when a boy. He afterwards became a teacher for a few years and was called "Master Watson", the county over. Soon he had larger duties to assume.

My great grandfather, a worthy man, whom I can still remember, passed away and left the whole estate of "Watson Hill" to his oldest son, my grandfather, as was the custom of the English. It has passed down to two more generations in the same way. The house, my birthplace, which was built in 1798, is still standing and I do not know that any of the 400 acres has been sold.

Ever since I attended school at the Academy, they have written me to be present at the school reunions or to send a letter or poem to be read. A few years ago, I wrote about what excellent rank I had, one term when a boy in the class shared his Interlinear translation of Virgil with me and how carefree the days were. "The boy" was president of a college in Tennessee or Kentucky, then. I did not mention his name, but it happened he was present at this reunion! He rose and said he was very glad and proud that he was the boy who shared his translation of Virgil with his old schoolmate, Alma Pendexter—now Mrs. Hayden—making a few more interesting remarks about the praise we received from our Latin teacher.

My mother took a course at this school before she became a teacher and her eighteen year old brother was in the academy when the Civil War started. He left school for the war.

The night before the Limerick boys started, the whole village was lighted until morning—open doors, war songs, refreshments, laughter, last walks together and, 'neath it all, sad hearts!

I was always thrilled by the story of it, as told me by my mother—that last night in the home town—and some of them never came back!

But to return to my schooldays. When father told me I was to go down to the Maine Central Institute to finish my course, I was sorry, as I was enjoying the academy and my schoolmates.

However, his word was law and my two sisters and I all graduated at the M. C. I., as it is familiarly called by the students. Father sent me, in summer vacations, to Portland, where I took lessons in French and German.

Sister Nellie went there to take lessons in oil painting and did several very fine pictures of Portland Harbor.

Bertha was sent to Boston Conservatory in the Dramatic Course. I came across an old program the other day, where father took me to the big "Peace Jubilee" in 1869. I heard Parefa Rosa sing and can remember Gilmore directing the great orchestra. There were a thousand voices in the chorus. I do not remember anything as inspiring in the Centennial at Philadelphia. In our party at Philadelphia there was a young minister, who had never attended the theatre because the church people thought it was wrong.

He wanted to see what it was like and father advised him to come along with us. We saw Colonel Sellers in "There's Millions in It". All went well till we were leaving the theatre, when we saw two young men from the minister's home town!

In those days I wrote verses for the Boston Transcript and every winter visited my dear friend, Miss Parloa of the "Ladies' Home Journal." She had an apartment overlooking the Common, where many young literary aspirants met in a Club. Among these, was Wm. Alexander, city editor of the Transcript and his brother, Charles. William later became manager of "The Ladies' Home Journal".

When I came to Boston, the Transcript always sent me tickets to all the best things at the theatres and it was a great treat for me to see Merchant of Venice. Macbeth, Pinnafore, Mikado, Dion Beauciscault in Shaugran (I am not sure I remember the exact spelling of those last names, but Geo. Howe will know).

Then I came to Norway and attended some of those "Silver Gray" dances—supposed to be very dignified. I heard one lady say she positively would not let her daughter attend because she did not wish her to see how badly her father acted. I attended one at Beals Hotel with Mr. and Mrs. Witherell.

Note—(All this was before my brother Hugh's day. Many interesting events followed, of which I may write later, if the Advertiser readers are not already yawning.)

When I went to Wisconsin to teach in Sparta High School, one of the teachers was John Esch, who has been in the House or Senate the past 30 years.

I remarked to him how strange the names of pupils, in a class of forty, seemed to me, saying that Schram, Scholler, Bedank, etc., would not be called upon to recite as often as the Smith and Jones boys. He said, "But Miss Penn, we have always thought your name was rather unusual," adding "Pendexter" in a musing way.

At that time Sister Bertha was in Boston Conservatory, studying Dramatics. and Hugh, I think, had finished high school and later graduated from the Nichols Latin School in Lewiston. Now his historical novels are known the world over and are greatly commended in England, where he has received high honors, being a member of several exclusive literary societies there. While teaching in Norway, the second time, I was asked to write the poem for the dedication of Powers Hall at the Maine Central Institute, my alma mater. Nellie went with me and was introduced as "little Miss Hayden" at the Governor's reception. Needless to say, we had a wonderful time.

Many sad events have come into my life, but I remember the courage of one, who suffered for years, in his young manhood—one who could say with a smile, to the last, "It is all right, I shall be better bye and bye."

His grave is in the old cemetery, where the dear departed of the family sleep.

Though far away, I think of you all, my dear friends of other days and am glad you do not forget me.

Tamarack Talk

"Virtuosa—A Book of Verse", by Louise Owen comes from Yale University Press. It is the twenty-ninth volume in the Yale Series of Younger Poets and again illustrates the point I have so often made—that poets are becoming more and more close to us, and we are, as a whole, getting to respond more sympathetically to the interpretation that contemporary poets put upon our existence, our experiences and our ideas.

Divided into three sections the new volume contains a variety of themes in a variation of meter and form. Though these do not approach the height of Frances M. Frost's "Hemlock Wall," there is beauty and reality in smooth lyric that does not seem to "try" to be "realistic."

Many of us would be just as apt to sit down and write a poem about an old shoe-horn as on a

"Chart Showing Rain, Winds, Isothermal Lines and Ocean Currents"

So, here, tied in that crooked line,
that is the North Wind,
trapped—and mapped!
And here,
raging, spitting, lashing its dragontail,
the furious East gale!
There, limed, caught in sticky color,
Zephyr and struggling South crouch together.
And see, writhing silver,
all the rains of heaven hiss and roar here.
Look, Coiled and wild,
a hundred green flashing currents
all the ways and waves of the Atlantic are meshed and bound.
And wound
in sinuous red lines
an isothermal pattern holds the Sun!

An effort to catch the myriad cacophonies of the city brings them into harmony in this—

City Music

The bass violin
On its resounding strings
Begins
The symphony of Things.
Long notes: street lights
That die like tumble stars;
Plucked notes
Of honking motor cars.
Dissonances
The pouring sounds of noon;
Staccato—
Feet break the afternoon.
Resolving chords:
Lightly echoes light.
Muted, the violin begins
The fugue of Night.

In the second group of poems called "New England" the sonnet "Beauty" says a great deal and brings beauty into our own back yard.

Beauty

Once it had seemed as if New England days could give her none of beauty's sobering:
sorrowful Fall, brief Summer, gradual Spring, consumed in Winter's white protracted blaze.
Here the blue dream of lands she had not seen darkened the windows, overhung her eyes:
only Egypt, her familiar skies
were hid in cobalt, azure, ultramarine.
But year by year that marked a dream's retreat behind shades away, until at last she found strange beauty everywhere: the rhythmic feet that walks upon: and seeds that crack the ground in garden beds with tiny springtime growth:
and the strong splendid colors of wet clothes.

I must include two sonnets from the last part of the volume, one of them still carrying out the idea of beauty in the commonplace, and the other a lovely symbolic sonnet, one of the choicest pieces in the whole collection of poems, in fact, perhaps the most excellent.

Commonplace

I am a lover of the commonplace,
The calm monotonous things of every day;
The sun, that sets the same red-golden way
So many times a year; the dew-and-lace
Of cobwebbed lawns at dawn; the silver trace
Of the moon's high career: the flaunt and play
In tulip gardens each recurrent May;
Women, and men; a child's adorable face.

I never set great store on rarity—
However often seen, can beauty fail
An ordinary bluebird seems to me
As lovely as the peacock's haughty tail.
Not educated—well, that's no disgrace;
It's kind to kind; I love the commonplace.

All Words Are Water

All words are water; running calm and fast,
Or issuing gradual, difficult, drop by drop,
In careful courses moving smoothly past,
Or wildly, from the rocks of a mountain top.
All words are water; caught and held to slake
Immortal thirst, their beauty still must be Confined in brooks or river, pond or lake—
The various-channeled banks of poetry.
An epic has the vastness of the sea;
A softly rounded pool is a quatrain.
A lyric like a spring leaps joyously;
Brooklike, a ballad turns and turns again.
A climbing fountain with the sun upon it,
Most beautiful and bounded, is a sonnet.
And there is the most beautiful definition of poetry that I have come across. Though one hates to apply the word "definition" to such a piece of poetic craftsmanship. No further comment can make you see the grace and charm in this sonnet more than your own re-reading and consideration of its fine quality.

Services were held at the schoolhouse, Sunday, for the last time until fall. Despite the heavy shower, there was a good attendance. Thurston Chapter of Rumford Point gave an excellent organ solo. Miss Louise Elliott of Rumford Point was presented with a slight gift as a token of appreciation of her services as organist.

Cedric and Burchard Russell are at their home for the summer. Mrs. Russell is caring for her mother, Mrs. Dorcas Bean, well of East Bethel.

A surprise kitchen shower was given Miss Mary Elliott of Rumford Point, Saturday evening at the home of Miss Lois Saunders. The rooms were decorated in green and white and the tables were also green. Miss Elliott was invited to Miss Saunders' home to rehearse some music and on entering the front room, at the piano, immediately the lights were turned on and a merry crowd was found assembled there.

In the center of the room under the light, was suspended a green heart shaped shade, from which streamers of green crepe paper dangled with small green packages attached to the ends. Each guest was requested to take one of the packages, which on being opened, disclosed material for dusters, cuttings and guest towels. Those made to be used by the guests for Miss Elliott's hope chest and the one who did the best work received a prize, Miss Blanche Russell and Mrs. Harry Elliott being judges. Later Miss Jones, who was a guest of Miss Ladd, received the prize.

Soon came a rap on the door and a request for Miss Mary Elliott, who upon going out found an Italian soldier with his push cart and bag. His black hair, fierce mustache, bright handkerchief around his neck, and attractive suit made a very successful disguise. He was immediately invited in, when he at once began to present his wares to Miss Elliott, with comments on each gift, which added greatly to the merriment of the party. As the guests had been invited to bring gifts of a green color, if possible, they included a coffee percolator, green glass measuring cup, lemon squeezer, butter dish, cake board, bread knife, kitchen utensils, green mixing bowl and pitcher, brush with green handle, enamel baking dishes, breakfast set of green glassware and numerous other gifts. The Italian peddler proved to be none other than Miss Freda Worcester, who acted the part to perfection.

A musical contest was then conducted by Miss Louise Elliott, Miss Mary Elliott being the winner. The party then wended their way to the dining room, where tables were already laid; green candles in green candle holders, lighted the tables, with apple blossoms in the center of each table. A merry hunt ensued for their places, which were designated by adjectives, etc., which began with the guests initials.

Refreshments included fruit salad, hot rolls, cake, fancy cookies, hot chocolate and ice cream. This present were Miss Eva Ladd and friend, Miss Jones, Miss Mary Elliott (the guest of honor), the Misses Pearl and Lenna Stowe, Miss Bessie White, the Misses Helen and Louise Elliott, Mrs. Stella Donahue, Miss Blanche Russell, Dorothy Elliott, Marjorie and Marian Thurston, Miss Sarah Fernald, Freda Worcester, also three mothers, Mrs. Lee Thurston, Mrs. Dwight Elliott and Mrs. Harry Elliott. Those unable to attend, but sent gifts were Katherine Elliott of Orono and Helen Thurston of North Rumford.

Harry A. Packard found a relic of Bethel in the highway between Norway and Norway Lake and left it in our care. It is a book containing a hand-writen census of Bethel dated 1870, probably the original record before government blanks were used. Owner can have the book if title can be established, otherwise Harry will present it to the Sports Editor.

Frank P. Stone started on his 78th year, June 4. He passed out the cigars and otherwise demonstrated his desire to live a century. He is gaining in health, after a set-back and goes to his store every day, but not as a plunger in active business. For forty-two years he has conducted the Stone's Pharmacy and feels proud of his record on Main Street. This office extends congratulations along with thanks for the Blackstone.

Stanley I. Perham of West Paris was here, Monday and had with him a three colored tourmaline of 250 carats and contains 175 flawless sections. It is a deep green at one end, grows lighter until it turns to a pale pink and then to a deep pink at the extreme end. It was mined at Mt. Mica in 1897 or 98. The mate to this is in the Chicago Museum. He also had with him a large unchecked rose quartz, which was taken from Stearns' ledge a few years ago. This is the largest piece found in this section and is of soft pink color.

Dr. A. Leon Sikkenga of 64 Brook Street, London, W. I., England, has dog fever, according to a letter of May 23. He informs the office that two Boston terriers have been imported for his special benefit. They went through the six months quarantine demanded there and "Mayfair Imp" was the only one of the breed in the Ladies Kennel Association Championship Show at the Olympia. The doctor says: "I am having a lot of fun with them as they are hardly known at all over here." Mrs. Sikkenga is in France with her mother, who is with the Gold Star Mothers, and will visit her brother's grave.

Mrs. Hortense Gates is boiling over with righteous indignation because two women stole most of the lilacs and ruined the bushes at her camp on Pike Hill. A large auto was seen to back into the yard and two women alighted. They raided the shrubs and ruthlessly broke down the branches until George R. Howe, who witnessed the vandalism, rushed across his field to the scene. The women hustled into their car and rolled away toward the village. Practically every flower cluster was taken. Mrs. Gates worked on the shrubs for a number of years to bring them to perfection, and is naturally pretty sore.

Frank H. Hobbs has a filling station at the Tavern Billiard Hall. Not the kind for automobiles, but where pocket cigar lighters may refuel. The machine is a perfect miniature gas pump and a replica of the standard kind for motor service. The game is to drop a coin in the slot, then pump gas into the lighter. This is said to be one of a few in the state and certainly the only representative in this part of Oxford County. His next inovation will be an automatic dummy for the shoe shine chair, when a gaily dressed flapper will apply the grease and brush up a shine. What next?

Who should breeze into the office, Tuesday but Grant Allmon, advance agent of the "Mutt and Jeff" show. He billed the show for South Paris on June 9 and skipped across the line to greet office friends here. Grant has covered the eastern states and Canada ahead of numerous attractions the past twenty-five years, and knows his routing. For two years or more he has spread paper ahead of Mutt and Jeff and Bringing up Father Companies. Before then he handled the billing a number of seasons for John Van Arnam's Minstrels, having graduated from long terms with other one nighters and reps. He said everything is new in the coming Mutt show with snappy comedy and rip roaring features sure to make a favorable impression.

Frank A. Brown of Bethel, Republican candidate in the primaries for County Commissioner, called on us Tuesday forenoon. During the conversation we learned that he lived in Norway way back in boyhood, his father was Josiah A. Brown. He was an enterprising kid and earned money oiling skates during the roller skating fever in '82 when the old Norway Hall was the rink. For a time he resided in Massachusetts, then migrated to Bethel and engaged in farming. So green was he on the start that he tapped oak trees the first year on the place. Mr. Brown is now a genuine farmer and knows Oxford County inside out. For twelve years he served the town of Bethel as road commissioner and first selectman, then represented his district for two terms in the state legislature.

A bit of news from O. W. Brown at Lynn, Mass., is of local interest and we take the liberty to quote as follows:

"Oliva LaFrance of Norway, called on me to inform me that his wife, who was Miss Thelma Sawyer, a former teacher in the Norway high school, had presented the family fireside with twins—not yet named—a boy and a girl. The double event took place at the Lynn hospital on the afternoon of May 24, and all are doing well. I didn't ask the weight of the new arrivals. Mr. LaFrance, et al., are residing at 18 Stewart street, Lynn. You probably know something about him—I only know that he is a member of the La France family."

Certainly we are acquainted with Oliva, who was graduated from Norway high school in 1924, and soon after went to Lynn, where his sisters, Lena and Marion reside. The twins have a number of uncles and aunts in Norway, George, Fred, Albert, Blanch and Irene LaFrance, who are waiting patiently for a glimpse of the new arrivals.

Fred Bonney of Phillips was in town, Tuesday, calling on friends. Mr. Bonney is a Republican candidate for congressman, along with Zelma M. Dwinal of Camden and Donald B. Partridge of Norway. Mr. Bonney was born in Andover and learned the printer's trade in the Maine Woods office at Phillips. He graduated from Harvard College in 1897. He says that "If you believe in progress such as the airplane and automobile, you know that partisan politics is twenty-five years behind the times. It represents too much wasted effort, too much graft, too little care in the selection of office holders, all of which has resulted in too much government, too many laws, too much tariff, too much interference with business and personal conduct." He is opposed to shipping Power out of the state and says that we need greater care of the forests, prohibition should be taken out of politics, Maine roads need more federal assistance, increase the demand for Maine's products, sell our state as a vacation playground and that he should endeavor to place the people's interests first.

If you want to see how bad a road can be just take a ride over to Harrison going via the Twin Bridges, but on the other hand if you have any regard for the occupants of your car or for your car itself, keep off, go even fifteen or twenty miles farther to avoid it. Both the town of Norway and the town of Harrison would be doing the motoring public a great favor if they would put up signs, "Road Nearly Impassable—Keep off", when it is in the condition it has been of late. What earthly good is there in improving sections of that road if there is no immediate prospect of connecting the sections by a good road instead of the prevailing sloughs. The past week would have been a fine time to have had the State Highway Commission pass over the road and see it as it really is. For some twenty years or more it has been bad and still is. To be sure there are short intermissions of improved spots, but the memory of the mud holes and the washed out hills predominates after getting through the ordeal. One would be surprised at the amount of travel there is between Norway and Harrison; a road across there somewhere would be a connecting link between the Roosevelt Trail and the White Mountain route via Norway, Paris and Bethel and somewhere in the vicinity there should be a road suitable to auto traffic the year around is in other sections. It is getting to be a serious matter. Is there no help for it? Other sections have good connecting roads between trunk lines. Why not in this case?

Edmund McKay has returned to the Hebron Sanatorium after two weeks vacation with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John McKay. He gained a number of pounds in weight during his visit in Norway.

NOTICE

Republican Voters of Oxford County

There are three reasons why I am a candidate for County Commissioner of Oxford County.

1st: My long service as 1st Selectman and Road Commissioner of the Town of Bethel, also my two terms at the State Legislature, makes me feel sure that the experience thus gained will count for efficiency as County Commissioner.

2nd: Oxford County is a large county and it would seem that one term of six years ought to satisfy the average office seeker.

3rd: To my mind there should be a fair distribution of the county officers. IS THERE NOW?

Voters of Oxford County, think this over and any help you can give me at the June Primaries will be greatly appreciated.

OXFORD

Woodstock 2; Oxford 1

One of the smartest battles on the diamond this spring was the airtight game of eleven innings between the high schools of Oxford and Woodstock, on Saturday.

This was a pitchers' scrap from the start. Staples of Oxford allowed only three blows, while Farrington of Woodstock held his opponents to three singles and a double. Misplays were scattering and had only a small effect on the score.

ALDRICH FOR CLERK OF COURTS

On June 16th the Republicans of Oxford County will elect the successor to the position of Clerk of Courts, now held by Donald B. Partridge. Three men aspire to the position. There can be but one winner. I believe that Rupert F. Aldrich is the one to whom the honor is due.

As a resident of the neighboring town of Paris where Rupert Aldrich was raised and as his friend, I wish to present a few facts regarding his past accomplishments. Those of us who have known him take a certain justifiable pride in forwarding his candidacy. We know he is a young man capable of handling the job and worthy of your confidence.

Mr. Aldrich is twenty-two years of age, married, a graduate of Paris High School, a Bates College man, and has had two years experience studying law in the office of Donald B. Partridge of Norway. As a sideline of work he makes saw frames. This special Buck Saw Frame was designed by Mr. Aldrich and is the only handcarved frame on the market. This work spare times and evenings has brought him sufficient returns to support his family and continue the study of law.

"Rup" Aldrich's High School record is a creditable one. In his Junior year he was vice president of the Athletic Association, manager of the school paper, class secretary and member of the Student Council. His Senior year recorded him as president of the Athletic Association, class treasurer and member of the Student Council. The "Chronicle", the school paper was dedicated to him in his Senior year. He also received the P. H. S. Alumni Scholarship of $50.00.

"Rup" Aldrich's high school athletic record is a brilliant one. It is written in indelible letter into the records of Paris high and into the hearts of all who know him. In baseball he played four years, two of which were under the tutelage of "Dave" Masterman. He was captain of football one year and letter man for three more. Basket ball credited him with three letters. A crowning accomplishment in winter sports gave him the captaincy of that for two years. He was State Champion for four years in the 100 yard Dash-Skiies, State Champion for three years in the Cross Country Run-Skies, and State Champion for two years in the 100 yard Dash-Snowshoes. These winter sports records were gained from an open field including high schools and prep schools.

During high school years Aldrich caught baseball two seasons for Norway in the Pine Tree League. Since high school days he has been obliged to drop all athletics, due to a severe leg trouble which finally culminated in the amputation of one leg.

The year 1927 at Bates College saw a continuation of that same courageous spirit of the past. He was a member of the orchestra, band, and glee club.

In 1928 he married Miss Mary Swan of Norway and began the study of law. By working spare times and evenings making buck saw frames, he has supported his family and continued his studies. He is a prominent worker in the church.

At this period in life you meet him in a political way. This is his first venture into political life. He is making a personal canvass of every town in Oxford County. Every friend of Rupert Aldrich will O. K. me in the statement that he has proved himself absolutely worthy of your best favor—a vote in the Primaries, June 16th.

Sincerely yours,
Harold C. Perham, South Paris, Me.

Would You Lose Although Insured?

People sometimes forget that properties increase in value . . . that added furniture, furnishings and household equipment swell the total of their holdings.

Insurance placed ten or even five years ago very often does not cover present-day values.

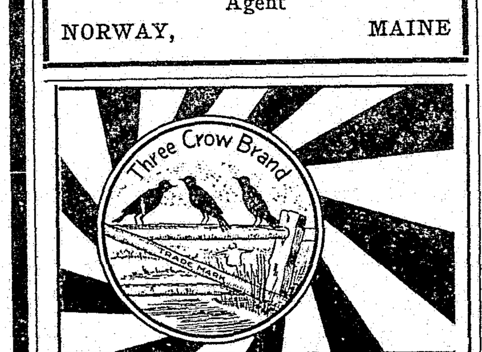

Unprotected losses sometimes wipe out a family's resources.

Let us make sure your insurance is up to the present time.

Consider the delivered price as well as the list (f. o. b.) price when comparing automobile values . . . Pontiac delivered prices include only authorized charges for freight and delivery and the charge for any additional accessories or financing desired.

The Pontiac Big Six enjoys a worldwide reputation for dependability—because it is built on big car principles and to big car standards of quality.

Its 60-horsepower motor develops maximum power at moderate engine speeds—is never over-taxed, no matter how fast or far you drive. The big main bearings are of the costly interchangeable airplane type. There is definite protection in the full pressure oiling system and crankcase ventilation which prevents dilution of the engine oil. Efficient cooling is assured by the cross-flow radiator. And Pontiac internal-expanding brakes frequently run 30,000 miles before the lining needs replacement.

You know, when you buy a Pontiac Six, you are buying a dependable car.

"Ah, I see, you don't look like a laborer. Your hands are not hard and calloused like mine. Guess you haven't done much hard work," remarked the farm hand.

The fellow rattled on about his work at Curtis' till the road leading to Alderburg was reached.

"I'll have to leave you here," said Tom. "Many thanks for the lift you have given me."

"You are welcome—so long." And e rolled away towards Scranton, merrily whistling. (Chapter IV, Continued)

Notwithstanding his temporary depression from his mother's sorrowful parting with him, Tom's spirits rose as he struck off on the railroad track running westerly from the village, through a wooded valley. It was a cool, clear morning and the stars, one by one, were fading out of the sky. He breathed in the invigorating air, and felt for the first time in his life, a sense of freedom that gave him new vigor. He was free to point now rested upon his name or character. With such thoughts as these, as he went along briskly, he was fast leaving behind Hedgewood's home. After some two hours' tramp, which took him about half an hour, Tom left the railroad track and turned into a way that led to the main highway from Lakeport to Scranton, some thirty miles distant, and the city northward. It was not his purpose, however, to go to Scranton, but into the vicinity of Alderburg, a village some twelve miles away, or to Huntington, between whose outlets for business were several. He soon came out into the highway and was fortunate thus far to meet with no one he knew.

He had not long been hiking it on the road to Scranton road when he was overtaken by a young man running an auto truck.

"Sure, and thanks," replied Tom. "A lift like this helps out on a hike." The driver was garrulous and communicative. He seemed to be delighted that he had some one who would listen to him. This suited Tom, who did not care then to interrupt his flow of words.

He was Luke Curtis' hired man, but had been to work for him but a little while. He's short of help. He lives on the road from this one running eastward. Has a good farm. I'm going over to Scranton for grain—get it cheaper there. Curtis pays thirty-five dollars a month and board. I have to work ten hours a day, with holidays and Sundays off. Don't want a job, do you?"

"Don't think I do." (It was too near Lakeport). "Awfully good of you to speak of it," said Tom, "but I'm bound further on."

"Ah, I see, you don't look like a laborer. Your hands are not hard and calloused like mine. Guess you haven't done much hard work," remarked the farm hand.

"No, I haven't, that's a fact," laconically replied Tom.

The fellow rattled on about his work at Curtis' till the road leading to Alderburg was reached.

"I'll have to leave you here," said Tom. "Many thanks for the lift you have given me."

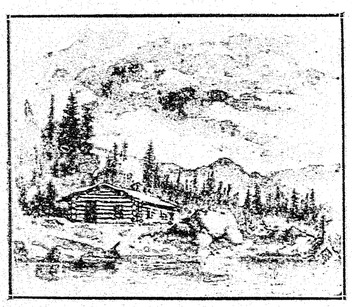

"You are welcome—so long." And he rolled away towards Scranton, merrily whistling. He had not asked Tom's name, but if he had, it is altogether probable that Tom would have dissembled without giving it, as he did not propose by any mischance his movements should get back at present to Lakeport. He had served by his ride, fifteen miles toward and he thought he was good for many more during the rest of the day.

He had covered about half that number of miles when espying a large oak tree near the road, whose spreading branches with their cooling shade, invited him to stop for rest, he went thither. His little silver watch told him that it was nearly eleven o'clock. His tramp over the dusty road had made him thirsty and, noticing a small stream of water running by, he twice filled his little tin cup that his mother had thoughtfully put into his grip, and drank copious draughts, which though not so cool as the water from the old well at home, yet was very refreshing. Then he stretched himself out for a rest and before he was aware of it, was fast asleep.

Tom awoke, much invigorated, and upon looking at his watch, found he had slept nearly two hours and feeling hungry, ate of his lunches of sandwiches and cheese which his mother had put into his grip. This done; he was ready to resume his hike and started off at a lively pace. He met several parties with teams or in carriages and some in autos passed him, but no one asked him to ride. Some looked with curious stares at him, but to these he paid no attention. Evidently the majority of those he saw wisely concluded that he was off for a hike and he judged that a hiker like himself was not an unusual sight on the road.

Along about sundown, he began to look for a place where he could stay for the night,—his idea being to stop at some farm house, but the section through which he had been hiking presented no one that seemed inviting.

The road here was not a good one and bushes had been allowed to grow up inside of the fences. He was becoming quite weary and ready for a rest, when he noticed at a little distance off the road what appeared to be a cabin or camp near a small grove of trees and he went over the fence to the spot to examine it. To get there, he crossed a little stream from which drinking his fill, he found the water to be cool and delicious. The camp was on a low ridge of land and he discovered that it only needed to be swept out after the cobwebs had been brushed down to make it temporarily habitable. It had a door which could be fastened on the inside with a bar and there were two or three small windows to let in the light. It took little time to gather boughs from some small evergreen trees growing near to put the place in condition for a night's occupancy and a couch on which to sleep. Then he turned his attention to preparing his supper. He had noticed while gathering the boughs a small field, a short distance away, in which apple trees were growing. Here he found that the fences had rotted down and the grass uncut. It was evidently a neglected place. On Tom's approach a brace of squirrels which had been eating some of the fruit, ran chippering away. Upon trying the quality of the apples, some of them were of a pleasant sour taste, and he filled his pockets with the best of them. Beside the decayed fence were some blackberry bushes on which grew an abundance of ripe fruit and Tom ate his fill of them, after which he returned to the camp. With his sandwiches, cheese, apples and water from the little stream, he had a bountiful repast. As darkness fell, Tom barred the door and laid down upon his sweet smelling couch of fir and hemlock, but before he resigned himself to sleep, he reflected upon what, if anything, he had accomplished during his first day of independence. Apparently it didn't seem to be much of anything, and yet all that he had expected or hoped for, had been attained. His first purpose was to get away from where he was known, without attracting attention or comment, and he was now beyond the influence of his enemies and the curious ones in Lakeport. He had been substantially offered a position which he had turned down for obvious reasons and his day's hike—thanks to the garruluous hired man of Luke Curtis, from whom he had learned what was expected of a farm hand and his pay—had left him in good condition for the business of the morrow.

There was one thing, however, which was quite satisfactory to him. The section of country into which he had come, though not promising he had turned to good account by providing him with a part of what promised to be three good meals and a night's lodging, and wisely judging, that farther on there would be a change and he would find a fruitful region, with prosperous farmers, where he might obtain a temporary job, he went to sleep.

anything at noon and only bread and milk at night. My sleep was restless and my whole system run down. A sluggish liver brought on dizzy spells and constipation. I started Sargon and now I feel invigorated all over! I'm eating and enjoying anything I want—chops and steaks and other foods equally as heavy without the least trace of indigestion. I sleep like a log, eat hearty breakfasts and get to work feeling fine!

"Sargon Pills cleansed my system of poisons, my liver is in fine shape, my color is clear and healthy and I'm entirely rid of constipation." Arthur Paquette, 111 Pearl St., Portland, Maine.

Handles Easier—Does Better Work

John Deere High-Lift Mower

(Equipped with Tongue Truck)

If you want to do a better job of mowing this year and for many years to come, go into your fields with a John Deere High-Lift Mower equipped with the quick-turn tongue truck.

The quick-turn tongue truck saves the horses and results in better work. The flexibly-mounted axle permits truck wheels to hold to the ground. There is no neck weight on the horses, and whipping of pole is eliminated. The truck always keeps the front end of mower frame at the correct height.

The improved lift on the John Deere is surprisingly easy to operate. By only slight pressure on the foot-lift you raise the bar high enough to pass over ordinary obstructions and when you put the hand-lift into use, the bar is easily raised to extreme height—the inner shoe is raised high enough to pass over any obstruction that can be cleared by the doubletrees and the knife continues to operate in this position.

Other advantages include balanced drive gears, which reduce wear and insure smooth running; special location of bevel pinion, which prevents end thrust; and 21-point clutch, which insures instant starting. All adjustments are made with ordinary tools.

We'll be glad to show you this improved mower.

TO DEPOSITORS IN SAVINGS BANKS:

In their issue of May 23rd, the Boston Herald comment upon a "Great Stock Swindle" as follows:

"To date there have been thirteen arrests in Connecticut and two in Massachusetts. . . . . .

"Connecticut authorities have described the stock swindles there as the worst in the history of their state, and have caused arrests in Massachusetts, Maryland, Pennsylvania, and Kentucky. Most of the men involved are Massachusetts stock salesmen. . . . .

"Savings bank withdrawal slips already printed to the order of. . . . . were carried by salesmen, who 'high pressured' the customer to sign so that the stock salesmen might withdraw savings immediately in payment for stock."

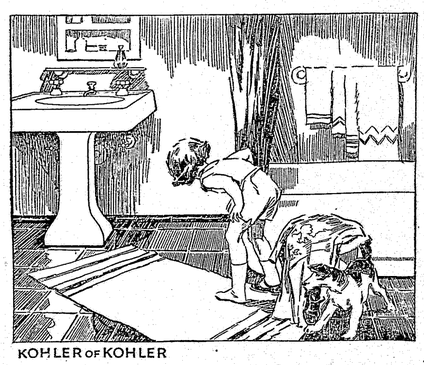

Salesmen who urge withdrawal of money from a Savings Bank to invest in stock he is selling, should be regarded with suspicion.

EAST STONEHAM

In Memory of Cecil Barker

It seems fitting to make a few additional statements in regard to the untimely passing of Cecil Barker, whose sudden departure from this life left such a shadow over the Community, and so great a vacancy among his nearest and dearest. His unforgotten personality reminds one that some of the rarest treasures do not belong to us, but are only our own for a while, and withdrawn, but not before the brightness of these, lives has left some rays to help light up the way when dark clouds hover.

His twenty-nine years seemed all too brief, and his wife, Eva Crouse, of North Waterford, is left to try to fill the place of mother and father to Edmond, eight years old; Chester, three years, and little Eleanor, six months, and may the sunshine that he took with him be reflected in his dear ones left behind, for a comfort to them until they unite with him above.

Dear beloved one, you have left us
Gone from earth to be no more,
Never more can we behold thee,
Now you've crossed to the other shore.

Do you know, dear, how we sorrow,
How our hearts are filled with pain,
How we wait and watch and listen,
For just a sign of you again.

Do you know up there in heaven
How your dear ones miss you so,
Miss the sunshine of your presence,
In our darkened homes below?

How we clasped our hands and prayed dear,
Dearest God please save our boy,
Spare him to us this time, Father,
He's our sunshine, love and joy.

Spare him to his wife and babies,
He's their stay o'er life's rough road,
Then, the healer, great Physician,
Lift from us this heavy load.

Did a voice come back from heaven
Through the midnight's silent gloom,
Don't despair, dear sorrowing mother,
Not thy will, but mine, be done.

Now our nights of earth are darker,
Where they once were full of day,
And our cloud's no silver lining,
They are shaded deep and grey.

Do I hear at times a whisper,
Sacred to my ear alone,
Mother help to bring my loved ones
To me in my heavenly home.

For up here there'll be no parting,
We can all unite again,
In a home of many mansions,
Where forever we shall reign.

In this far off home in glory,
Where no sorrow ever comes,
Happy in the love of Jesus,
There he waits our coming home.
